VERENA '70

Announcement

You are cordially invited to witness and at the same time participate in an uncut version of the great film

A story taped, a projection set upon a 360° screen, a spark of life
between one eternal darkness and another, this great film
is continuous, without beginning nor end.

We regret that it cannot and will not be repeated at your convenience.
However,

you are urged to receive as much as you can throughout your limited life span if you are to grasp the essence of
this great film

We wish to express our most sincere thanks to our beloved producer-director Unknown
for all these gifts for without which
would have been impossible.

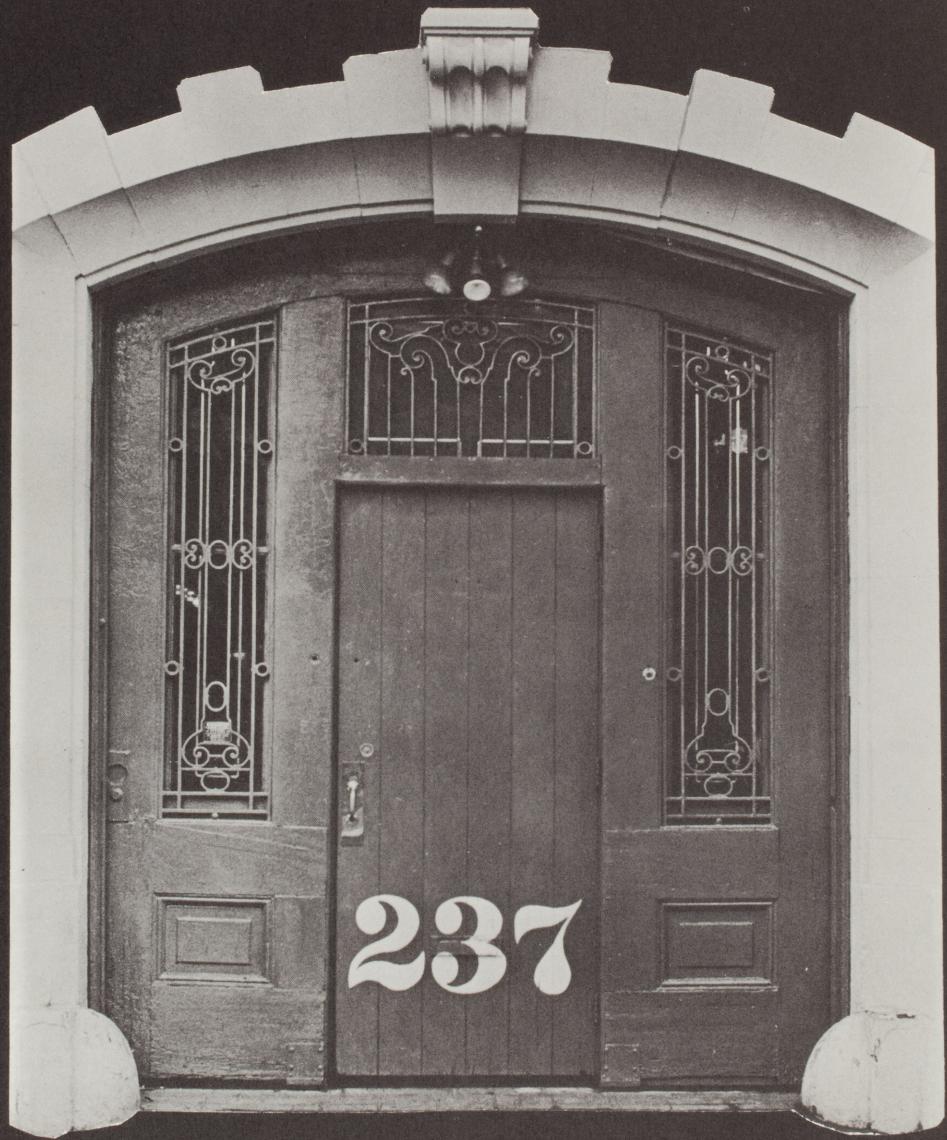

Your active participation will be infinitely appreciated.

I film not reviewed at press time

Amen.

o fill this page with words, first made me think of suicide, but now as I ramble on hings seem further out of distance. Final words have no justification, but are said as am leaving. Ha! SOME WORDS ARE LARGER AS THESE, or smaller as these, but none the less he truth remains the same, as though the way I write was unintelligible. O sweet love hine on me, I'll be damned to drown and the flood is rising. How can I finish now that know the final line? O lord come into me. I am stalling. What I really want to tell you s that too many nights have stepped through the window and left arm and arm with tomor-ow. I don't know why this page should scare me, it must be my only salvation, although t hasn't done anything for me yet. At this point it is up to you. The lord no longer istens to me, despite the fact that he occasionally whispers in my ear. After every two r three sentences I feel as though I am stalling again. Do realize I could kill myself o prove a point. If I really thought today would be my last day, would I be writing non-ence like this? Would it sound more desperate, more bitter, more at peace? Now the cat s scratching at the bottom of his pan. O God, it hurts to not know what you want to say, s if it really made a damn bit of difference. But I know I have written sweeter things han these. This is can't be what I want to say. I will start over more poetically. My ast promise is to you. Every word comes from the lack of something else and my promises re no exception. You know perfectly well what I mean. This doesn't sound like poetry, it ounds similar to what I was saying before, though there are definate patterns being fol-owed here. Perhaps this shows the fragmented mind of the eposodic schizophrenic. I just se that as an excuse, you realize, to cover my own inadequacies. You know and I know that am sane. Unfortunately though, my thoughts were not designed to be housed in such a rain. They only arise through inadequacies, even though I can't spell. That is one of any that I have in my possession. Perhaps it is precisely these inadequacies of exsisence that make things at all interesting. There is choice for you! Do you want to lead n interesting life or a perfectly content life? That precludes the fact that some peole are content with thier inadequacies. I think these are the people who have found omething to balance with—to equal the scales on both sides. This brings me back to my riginal problem. This may be the lack of something or of the ability of these words to o anything. It is up to you to find the connection between the two. Now my only prob-em is to find a poem that will successfully conclude this passage. O lord come into me. id you ever think that there might be one face, one image of a person who manages to alk through everybody's dreams. You know, perhaps he is seen as just a passer-by or as face in a dream of crowds, and that if we ever saw this face in the flesh, we would ecognize him immediately as someone we have seen before. I have met and let us say fol-owed many, mostly women though. I can't admit that these were my only motives, but at east during these moments life was content and very exciting. I would have to clarify hat I meant by content, because at these times I was still aware of the fact that I as very much detatched from the other person. Enough of this crap. Do you see now that his was meant for you. Or do you think other people will read this and think that it as meant for them? Do you believe that I have just one person in mind or do you think hat as I write I am considering the masses? If you have followed me this far you know hat this is not what I wanted to say. Strength is the most important element that I ould now want to get across. You would stand and marvel at how calmly and with such oise that I would stand up to the most underhanded tricks in the little games we choose. o you ever feel like doing away with the games? That is when I think that writing this ill ever do anything. When you put this down, please don't think I had nothing to say.
